Art in the news

Suspects arrested for attempted theft of Picasso and Warhol works.

Police interrupted a heist at the American Fine Art gallery in Scottsdale, Arizona on the 7th January, apprehending the would-be thief on the building's roof. The suspect, Harpeet Singh, who apparently travelled from California to undertake the theft, scattered stolen works on nearby rooftops before being located by police drones.

Triggering an alarm system that led to an American Fine Art employee inspecting the premises. Upon arrival, the employee noticed several missing works and the sound of an intruder on a phone call in a gallery office.

‘A Day with Picasso’ by Billy Kluver

‘Art is eternal, but life is short’. Reading is important to build your literacy and find out more about art and artists. Picasso is a well-known artist, so why not find out more information to understand why Picasso made the artwork he did!

The Shape Of Water: Artist Alia Farid on the impact of extractive industries in Iraq and Kuwait

The multidisciplinary work of the Kuwait-Puerto Rican artist Alia Farid explores what she describes as the “complex and fragmented histories” of these regions, and how styles, symbols, rituals and social devices coalesce across continents. This can involve filming and social devices coalesce across continents. This can involve filming a fisherman’s festival on the island of Qeshm in the Persian Gulf, installing an orchard of replica date palms made from mechanical components on the terrace of New York’s Whitney Museum of American Art or making giant resin sculptures in the form of scaled-up Kuwaiti drinking fountains.
